

Introduction

The Right to Information Act has been enacted in the Parliament in the 56th year of Republic of India. Under section 4(b) of the Right to Information Act laid down 17 manuals for all citizens to have the right to information and therefore every public authority shall maintain all its records duly catalogued and indexed.

The object/purpose of this handbook is to ensure access to information to citizens from the Directorate of Information Technology, Puducherry and to promote transparency and accountability in the functioning and governance of this Directorate. Democracy requires an informed citizenry and transparency of information is vital to its functioning. Hence it is expedient to provide for furnishing certain information who desire to have it.

All the citizens of India can use this handbook. This handbook gives information about the Directorate of Information Technology, Puducherry.

The details of the Public Information Officer and Assistant Information Officer may be seen at chapter - manual - of this Handbook.
